Lesson Title: Dangers of the Internet & Online Predators

Instructional Time Required: One Class Session

Lesson Objectives: Students should be able to:

- Understand the pros and cons of the internet.
- Understand the difference between online enticement and sextortion.
- Identify where predators are reaching their victims online.
- Explain what grooming is and identify grooming tactics.
- List steps they can take online to protect themselves from online predators.

Lesson Overview:

This lesson starts with listing some statistics to depict how common it is for teens to be online and be contacted by a predator. Students will learn about the pros and cons of the internet, and we recommend that you open up a dialogue with students, having them come up with some of their own examples. Students will learn the difference between online enticement and sextortion as well as grooming and tactics predators use to groom youth. It is important for students to understand what the signs of grooming are since it is often the first step for a predator to foster a relationship with a minor and build trust. Students will learn about where online predators are reaching their victims, such as popular online platforms they may use every day. Students will watch a video called "Teen Voices: Who You're Talking to Online" by Common Sense Education, which is a video with various teens describing their online interactions with people online and the risks that come with it. Students will watch a video called "Real-Life Stories- 6 Degrees of Information" created by NetSmartz, where five teens find out how much information an internet researcher is able to find out about them online. Online safety recommendations are listed and students will take know2protect's Pledge2Protect, vowing to stay safe online.
